

Living Naturally Selects Janam's XP Series

Janam's Palm-based rugged mobile computer is chosen for market leading, barcode-based shelf ordering system

WOODBURY, New York – May 20, 2008 – Janam Technologies LLC, a provider of rugged mobile computers that scan barcodes and communicate wirelessly, today announced that Living Naturally, the leading provider of technology and marketing solutions to the natural product industry, selected the Palm OS®-based XP20 handheld for its advanced customer management and field sales ordering system.

"Our Scan Genius solution continues to have tremendous impact on sales force productivity, ranging from time savings during in-store inventory and order taking to the near elimination of order-related errors," said Jim Sheehan, B2B Product Manager, of Living Naturally. "We are pleased that Janam's XP20 protects our investment in this winning barcode-based software solution with a mobile device that is smaller, lighter, faster and just as rugged as legacy Palm platforms."

"We are proud that Living Naturally, a company that is clearly a vanguard in the area of mobile data-capture technology solutions, selected Janam's XP20," said Dwight Ogletree, VP of Sales for Janam Technologies. "Living Naturally and its customers understand better than most the benefits of a fully featured, lightweight yet rugged handheld device with superior scanning capabilities, and we are very pleased that Janam's rugged XP20 delivers the power and performance that positively showcase the advantages of Living Naturally's Scan Genius ordering system. "
